

I have experienced an incredible decrease in the number of solicitation calls as soon as I registered for Indiana's No Call list. I am concerned that a "watered down" national version would allow invasions of my privacy to resume. Since this is a voluntary option for Indiana citizens and that so many of our population enrolled, why insult these people by lessening our choice. Companies can mail their information without disrupting valuable family time. I hope that any national policy would not preempt state actions and further intrude on taxpayer lives.
